PROJEKTTITEL

Cultural and Political Flows of Protest. Post-Identitarian Social Movements and Trans-national Knowledge Production

PROJEKTBESCHREIBUNG

The main focus of my research is what one may call “post-identitarian” social movements. These movements, from the Zapatistas via the queer movement to current democratization movements in the West, have become suspicious of the idea of a stable identity, including their own identity. Strategies and procedures of self-questioning are deliberately built into the cultural, artistic, mediatic and performative practices of local and transnational protest. In my time at the IFK I will study two aspects of the phenomenon: (1) the question of how transnational social movements cope with the dissolution of (academic and theoretical) certainty markers by producing their own knowledge and theories; and (2) how they deliberately turn un-certainty into a productive and democratic tool by constructing their own identity along non-essentialist, non-identitarian lines.
